

The coastal path of the town

The route starts in Cala Montgó and from the beach itself you head towards L'Escala, but take Carrer Trenca Braços up to the right, which coincides with the GR-92. Once at the top, in front of Illa Mateua, in Carrer Punta Montgó, turn left to follow the sea, following the GR-92 markers. Go past the Punta dels Cinc Sous, Cala del Salpatx and Les Penyes until you reach the Port de la Clota.

Cross over the port by carrer Romeu de Corbera until you come to Riells Beach. At the beach, walk along Passeig del Petit Príncep until you get to Passeig del Mar, which takes you, following the coast, to the old centre of l'Escala. Carry along Passeig Lluís Albert and Port d'en Perris to La Platja (the main town beach). From La Platja take Carrer Cargol and then Ronda Mar d'en Manassa, on your left, following the coastline. Go past La Creu small bay where you will see the fishermen's huts. This coastal path takes you to the place known as L'Oberta, from where you can see the beaches of Empúries. Walk along the Ronda del Pedró for about 200 metres and when you get to the Lampadòfor (the lamp bearer, the sculpture built to commemorate the arrival of the Olympic flame) turn right to take the Empúries Promenade.

The Empúries Promenade is two and a half kilometres long and runs parallel to the beaches of Empúries. It takes you past the Platja del Rec, Portitxol, Les Muscleres and Moll Grec beaches and you come to Sant Martí d'Empúries, which is the end of the route.

Other values

The stretch of the GR-92 between Cala Montgó and the Port de la Clota used to be a military area and you can still find a series of bunkers between the pine trees. A population of orchids, lilies and lent lilies can be found in the spring, making it an interesting route thanks to its flora.

The Promenade that runs along Riells beach is dedicated to Antonie de Saint-Éxupery's book The Little Prince. While walking along it you will find all kinds of references to this piece of work: the figure of the Little Prince sitting on a wall, the fox on the stairs of the Plaça de l'Univers, the palm trees tracing the eastern constellations, the volcanic rocks, a baobab tree and a rose on the ground.

A few metres on, following the promenade, you will come to the Roca del Frare (a rock that was saved from the sea and which, from a certain angle, looks like a praying friar).
